Andrew Winston Morley 1948-2013

Andrew Morley was a longstanding member of ICES and the institution benefited from his time and experience over a period of nearly 40 years.

He was a true quantity surveyor, specialising in the practices of measurement, taking off, working up and preparing bills of quantities. When QS colleagues around him were moving towards commercial, risk and project management, contractual and procurement choice and dispute resolution specialisms, Andrew remained committed to the technical expertise of traditional quantity surveying and his company, CCM Associates, specialised in this. His overseas ventures, notably in Iraq, Hong Kong and Nigeria, gave him a great breadth of experience in the application of these practices in differing circumstances.

He joined ICES in 1975 and was a keen supporter of the International Federation of Surveyors (FIG). He was instrumental in the formation of commission 10; dedicated to construction economics. He went on to chair the commission for four years. He was a member of the ICES International Affairs Committee and over the years of his involvement with the institution served on regional and publications committees. Stephen Booth, a former editor of Civil Engineering Surveyor, remembers sharing a car with Andrew and the late Mike Fort when attending ICES meetings during the 1970s. Andrew's conservatism, tempered by Mike's socialism and Stephen's liberalism, made for some lively journeys! Lifelong friendships were cemented; a common theme in the early days of ICES and a footing of comradeship on which the institution still stands.

With contributions from John Bacon and Stephen Booth
